

In The Nation Today

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON, June 23—(AP)—Here's a brief ABC on the Taft-Hartley labor bill and what led up to it.

By nightfall today it will be law or it will be dead.

Friday the House re-passed it over President Truman's veto. The Senate votes today. If it re-passes the bill, it's law at once. If not, it's killed.

In all history Congress has never passed a bill which affects labor and management in so many ways.

If it becomes law, you'll be reading about it for years to come.

It's so big, it's so complicated, and it does so many things that the wisest labor lawyer right now can't tell you all it means or would do.

For that reason many suits and test cases will be taken into federal courts to get decisions on what this or that means.

For 150 years in this country unions fought to force employers to bargain with them. No law said a boss had to bargain with a union.

To gain their point, union struck. Frequently a boss could get federal judges to order them, by injunction, not to strike.

In 1932 Congress gave organized labor its first big help. It passed the Norris-LaGuardia Act.

This law practically made it impossible for a boss to get a court order stopping a strike. This strengthened unions' bargaining power a bit.

But there still was no law compelling a boss to bargain with a union. Labor got this in 1935 when Congress passed the Wagner Act.

This act, in brief, did two main things. It said:

1. A boss has to bargain with a union of his workers. It didn't say a union has to bargain with a boss. The union could stall, if it wished.

2. The boss can't be unfair to unions, such as threatening to fire a man if he joins a union.

(The National Labor Relations Board (NLRB), set up to administer the Wagner Act could, with the help of courts, make a boss stop being unfair.)

In the 12 years since 1935, by grace of the Wagner Act, unions have grown tremendously strong, too strong to suit some people, including Congressmen.

Critics of the Wagner Act said it gave unions all the benefits and bosses none.

Now this year Congress has passed the Taft-Hartley bill to put restrictions on unions.

It puts more restrictions on them than they've had in all history.

The bill would make changes in the Wagner Act and add some new things of its own.

From here on, for simplicity's sake, this story will assume the bill becomes law today through Senate action. Here are some of its main points:

1. Employers still are compelled to bargain with unions. But now unions must bargain with a boss. They can't stall him.

2. Closed shops—Where everyone must be a union member—are forbidden. The Wagner Act permitted closed shops.

3. In spite of the Norris-LaGuardia Act, the government can get injunctions to hold up for 60 days strikes endangering national health and welfare.

4. Bosses are freer now to tell workers what they think about a union. The bosses had to be pretty careful under the Wagner Act.

Your Blink Rate Set By Glare

NEW YORK—Your eyelid's batting average—how often you blink—may help find the best conditions for easy reading.

Three researchers of the General Electric Co. laboratory at Cleveland believe that the rate of eye blinking, under proper controls, can be used as a standard for ease of seeing.

Matthew Luckiesh, S. K. Guth, and A. A. Eastman report that a group of adults, reading good printing under good light, blinked seven times a minute at the beginning, and about nine times a minute after an hour of reading. Under glare, the blinking increased 56 percent.

The blink rate can be helpful in determining the best conditions of lighting; how glare, size of type, brightness of surroundings and other factors affect reading ease, they state in the publication Illuminating Engineering.

5. A boss doesn't have to bargain with a union if any of its officers are communists. The Wagner Act said nothing about this.
6. Bosses don't have to bargain with their foremen, even though they join a union. The Wagner Act ignored this.
7. Unions can't charge "excessive" dues. The Wagner Act put no limit on this.
8. Unions and bosses can't break contracts without being liable for damage suits. The Wagner Act didn't cover this.
9. Unions can't commit "unfair" labor practices (there's a list of them.) Under the Wagner Act, bosses were forbidden such practices.
- The list of do's and don'ts is very long.

They Call It San Francisco But It Isn't Really There

By HAL BOYLE

SAN FRANCISCO, —(AP)—This isn't really a city—it's a matter of faith.

There is no such thing as San Francisco. You can see it on the map, and drive through it, and get run over by motor car in it. But it isn't really there.

This is the second time I've been in it, but you can't convince me it really exists. It is like London in Shakespeare's day or Paris for restless Americans in the ten years after the first World War.

It is ninevah and Tyre and a mist-ridden Babylon—well, policed. It is the Far East in transfiguration, and the old west wrapped in amber. It is a melting pot where the ingredients mix without anger.

San Francisco is a product that sells itself. The people who make up the place are glad to see you when you come, but they wouldn't give you a lead to induce you to stay. They would pay money to keep from being a second New York, and they'd mortgage their homes to prevent becoming another Los Angeles.

They are one of the most history conscious communities west of Cairo, but they never have got the idea that history doesn't keep on happening.

There is always a fog coming up here, and there is always a breeze to blow it away. That is what is known locally as the climate.

It is the only settled place in America where a stranger wishes in summertime he had brought along his wooten underwear. When the hot sun sets he starts looking around for the penguins. Nature air-conditions it to make the temperature of a Kansas movie theater in July.

San Francisco is grown up. Like New Orleans, it believes in food. It is the happy hunting ground of the finicky alimentary canal, a palace of the palate, be it steak-hungry or in quest of tapioca-tasting Oriental bird's nest soup. A shrimp is shrimp-sized here as it is in Copenhagen. If you want what the stature-worshipping Manhattanites call a "shrimp" your pocketbook is in pawn to a "prawn."

You have heard of the "Hollywood diet?" You will never hear of a "San Francisco diet!" A fat man here doesn't have to apologize every time he reaches for the olive oil. He isn't embarrassed to stick his fork into a well-flavored calorie.

San Francisco is one of the few places left in the world under a million population that is still lusty, gassy, sentimental and individual. It builds the country's most modern underground garage—but it wants to get out its six-shooters when somebody tries to abolish its historic cable cars.

It stands on as many hills as Rome—but stays on the level. It tamed the Barbary Coast without destroying the exuberance that made it. It has both Alcatraz, the symbol of quarantine, and treasure island, which carried on in the legend of the Golden Gate.

It built the two great bridges of tomorrow without letting go of its bridge to yesterday, when the gold mines and clipper ships gave it the peculiar luster it has never lost.

But San Francisco still isn't so. It's the fabled city that never was quite true, like Athens of old, the city that everybody wants to be in, and never wants to leave. It's a long municipal romance without a carthage ending.

It doesn't exist and never did. Yet here it is. And while you're here—you have to believe in it. For San Francisco is purely a city of the heart, a projection of whatever you came to find.

Our Part In Peace

The report of the commission to study the organization of peace, just issued, contains many recommendations concerning the United Nations and security. Drafted by specialists under the leadership of Dr. James T. Shotwell and former Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles, it covers every phase of activity of that organization. The commission makes, among others, these recommendations:

Strengthening of the already growing United Nations until it can outweigh in authority any unruly member bent on disturbing world peace in any way; constant pressure toward political agreement, which will lead to disarmament and security; immediate implementation of the United Nations police forces, and of plans for temporary increase of those forces in case of emergency; internationalization of Antarctica to be included in a program of establishment of UN bases; disarmament of national forces as the international one grows to safe strength; and international agreement for control of all weapons for use against aggressors only.

International criminal law codes and criminal tribunals are recommended; and special emphasis has been laid upon UN handling of world economic problems on such a scale as to eliminate most causes of national friction.

And finally, they say, the most necessary factor, the one which can most quickly strengthen the UN and with it world peace for generations, is a world public opinion desirous of peace above all, and so sure it can be attained, that nothing can change its support. A reaffirmation of world faith, belief and desire for peace, is the strongest force in the world today for the accomplishment of what all of us most want.

It is our job to show that faith by word and action.

Strengthening the UN

If the American people intend taking Gen. Eisenhower's excellent advice to begin active individual and community efforts for peace, the first question is where to start. One answer has already been provided by some forward-looking communities which anticipated the general's counsel.

These communities have been stirring up a concerted sentiment in favor of strengthening the UN. And surely there could be no better place for the American people to exert the united weight of their efforts toward the prevention of war.

The U. S. is the UN's permanent home. The delegates of the 55 nations will spend much of their time here, and they cannot fail to be conscious of the national feeling that surrounds them. It is up to us, the UN's host, whether feeling is to be one of passive despair or active hope.

The UN is not yet a forum for the world's peoples. It is an organization of world governments. This was made clear during the setting up of the Palestine commission of inquiry. But that is no reason why it should not be sensitive to popular opinion, in America and elsewhere. For once the American people were mobilized for the prevention of war, other democratic peoples certainly would follow their lead.

How should the UN be strengthened, then? Its present weaknesses are apparent. The UN obviously lacks a genuine authority. It lacks a body of international police to enforce what limited authority it has. It lacks even the power to act by majority decision on vitally important matters.

This last weakness, while perhaps not the most important has caused the most trouble thus far. The root of that weakness, it hardly need be said, is the veto power.

Whether the veto power is a good or bad thing is, unfortunately, beside the point. The big-power governments are committed to it and seem to be sold on it. Russia's use of the veto is not what the other Big Five members had in mind when they accepted this Yalta-made agreement at San Francisco. There seems to have been a sort of gentlemen's agreement at that time to use this power only in extreme cases.

It hasn't worked out that way. So it seems necessary to amend the UN charter limiting the veto to the matters envisioned in this gentlemen's agreement. This is one goal to which united popular sentiment might aim its efforts toward permanent peace. Of course, Russia or any other of the Big Five has power now to veto changes in the charter. But the pressure of the opinion of millions throughout the world might be more persuasive than the arguments of delegates.

The marshalling of that opinion would be a long, hard job, but that is no reason why a start should be delayed. No one has said it would be easy. But no one can say that it is not worth trying.

With Mayor Hague of Jersey City joining Mayor Kelly of Chicago in retirement, and vote fraud activities of the Pendergast gang in Kansas City being investigated, 1947 does not look like a bright year for the bosses.

Heinrich Himmler's widow is now reported to be in an insane asylum. Living with the chief of the Gestapo would drive anyone crazy.

This country right now should take more interest in foreign languages. It is especially a job for college and high school students. Said some wise soul: "The man with one language is a man with one arm."

Diet and Health New and Difficult Problems

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

NO time in life is without its problems, but those which come with old age are, as a rule, more tinged with sadness than are those of any other period, and for this reason deserve more sympathetic attention than they are sometimes given.

Think of what it means to grow old! No matter how much may have been accomplished in the past, vigor is gradually diminished. Life's activities must be curtailed. Old friends vanish and lasting new ones are not easily made during the declining years.

Hurry and Bustle

Little by little, the aging individual begins to feel that the world with its hurry and bustle, its vast array of events, its charm and interest is passing him by. And as he stands aside for a last, long farewell look, he is gripped with a feeling of tremendous loneliness.

Along with this, his physical condition also declines. He has no ability as a wage earner, and often finds himself dependent upon children, friends or others. As a result, he feels insecure, and these feelings of loneliness and insecurity have a marked effect upon his personality.

Feels Unwanted

Such an elderly person feels that he is in the way, that he is not wanted, and that he is a burden and a bother to others.

On the other hand, when elderly persons live with their children, the old folk, as a rule, ramp the children's activities, often are generally troublesome and are never satisfied with the care with which they are provided. All of these things lead to even more anxiety on the part of the aging individual. It is no wonder then that many elderly persons crack under the strain and develop emotional disturbances.

Probably the most important of all these factors in producing emotional upsets, is the feeling of insecurity, which in turn leads to fears and anxiety.

Feeling of Confidence

Thus, it is important to try to develop in the aging person a feeling of hope and confidence in himself and an outlook on life that includes cheerfulness.

Development of interests in the aging person is also important. There are many types of social activities toward which the elderly person's interest may be turned. He should be encouraged to do things that are worthwhile, because he will get a great deal of satisfaction out of accomplishment, and this in turn will help overcome the feeling of uselessness which is often present.

Over-Protection

Over-protection of an elderly person by children may be as bad as inattention. Children often completely advise, nag and beg the aging person not to undertake any physical activities to which he has been accustomed. If the elderly person accedes to these requests, he is usually unhappy in doing so, and he feels suppressed, and, as a result, emotional upsets occur which are responsible for conflicts and unhappiness.

The elderly person can be a happy, serene individual if some attention is given to these important matters.

CHAPTER FORTY-FIVE

DIANE DID not go with her father to join Paula upstairs; she made the excuse of needing to begin her packing. She kissed him, tightened her arm around his neck, moved for a moment by qualms for not having been wholly frank with him.

"You're good to me, Dad!"
Back at the apartment she began to go through the bureau drawers, separating their contents, these to pack, these to leave behind. She would not need much more than roughing clothes, there at Tim's, and afterward, afterward—well, someone could pack up what she had left here. As she had packed away Nellie's things.

Was this the way other women did it? Did they feel only numb? Bill was gone when she awakened the next morning. Carrie, at her call, brought some coffee to her bed.

"Mr. Arden says to tell you he won't be home to dinner this evening. It's one of his meetings, I s'pose."
"I won't be home either, Carrie. You can go when you've washed the dishes."

"I fiddled on doing the kitchen cupboards today, Miss Arden."
"I'd rather you'd go," said Diane, sharply.

She waited with a cold, compelling excitement for the moment of the woman's departure, when she could pull bags down from the high shelf in the closet, begin to pack them.

The only reality in the day were its hours moving ahead; she moved with them as mechanically as the hands of the clock at which she glanced frequently, as much driven by complicated wheels as were they.

Her father telephoned to her. "I'm sending your tickets out by a messenger. And your train leaves at six-thirty."

"Thanks, Dad!"
"Sure you can make it on your own."

"Oh, yes! Just for thinking of getting away I feel better, truly!"
"I suppose Bill will put you on the train—"

She answered that with: "You promised, Dad, remember!"

"Sure, sure! But you wire me from Chicago and when you get to Tim's, I'll phone Tim; he's tickled you're coming and he's said he'd take good care of you. Good-by, chick!"

"Goodby, Dad, and thanks."
Lois called her. Danny. She met their importuning briefly, coldly. When her bags were packed and locked and she had put on the light wool dress she had left out to wear on her journey she sat down at her desk, reflecting, with a slight twist of her lips: "Run away wives always leave a note! And suicides!" Was it consideration, or merely the satisfaction of having the last word? She wrote:

"We left it that we wouldn't talk about a divorce until after your campaign, but I have decided to go to Reno, for if I free you now you can try that case against my father. Everyone's sympathy will be with you so I do not think it will hurt your political standing. Good luck."
"DIANE."

She did not read it over; she folded it, propped it on the mantel where Bill must see it the instant he came into the room. Irresistibly she glanced up to the face of the first Judge William Arden above her. "I suppose you knew, all the time, it'd end like this!"

At the station her porter told her the train would not go out for fifteen minutes. "You sit here, lady, and I'll come back." But Diane could not sit still; impatient at the delay she moved restlessly about the big waiting room, studied posters without seeing a line in them, the fronts of magazines on the newsstands.

"Hello, Di! What are you doing down here?"
It was Rufus Kent at her elbow. She swung around, alarmed, pale with vexation at his intrusion. She answered shortly: "What do people come to stations for?"

"To meet someone or see someone off! I've just put the head of the Northrup Syndicate on the train. But you—" his glance sweeping her was keen and curious: "You have all the look of going away."

Rufus took hold of her arm. "I'll take charge of you!" To anyone observing he must appear only a gallant escort of a lone and very pretty young woman, but Diane saw the line of his mouth and felt his fingers dig hard into the flesh of her arm.

"This isn't the way," she cried. "To my car!" Rufus retorted. "You can't—how dare you—"

She struggled to free herself, but vainly, for his vice-like grip on her only tightened.

"There are other trains."
When they reached his car she flung herself into the far corner of the seat, shaking with anger, too choked with it to utter further protest. Until he had driven several blocks, when she cried out: "What possible right can you claim to interfere like this?"

"He turned the car into a side street, stopped it at the curb. "Only this, Di. I care too much for you to let you go off the deep end without trying to save you. You've been running amuck these last months—I knew it when I saw you there at the apartment, that day. You haven't been yourself, you're afraid to be yourself. To square up—"

"That is exactly what I was setting out to do," defended Diane with spirit.

"You think so?" Contempt edged Rufus' tone. "Looked a minute ago as if you were running away! I'll wager Bill doesn't know a thing about it. Your face betrayed that, when I spoke to you. Probably you left him a note! You didn't give him a chance to speak for his side of the bargain—"

"You don't know everything," cried Diane chokingly. "Bill wants to be free. I don't help him in his profession. And he cares more for that, for getting ahead in it—than our marriage. He puts that first."

"You don't know Bill very well, do you?" said Rufus. He started the car abruptly.

Diane locked her hands tightly together, fighting to hold to her anger. Without it, without the hardness which had sustained her for so long—

She clutched Rufus' arm. "I won't go back to the apartment! I won't!"

"To your father's?"
"No, not there! Oh, Rufus!" Tears sprang to her eyes. "Why didn't you let me go! I'll start tomorrow—you'll see that I will!"

Rufus stopped the car again. He put his hand under her chin. "You must get away, go. But not where you were heading, not yet!"

A deep urgency in his voice and the appeal on his face silenced her and he went on: "Separate yourself from this that's gone wrong so as to see it for what it is. Remember you said something once about making your heart stand still? You didn't think it could be done. I've reason to know it can. It happened to me on my voyage out east. With nothing but ocean around me I had opportunity to clean my house pretty thoroughly, sort out the feelings I'd taken away with me, and find the real under them all. It put me on my feet, Di?"

"I can't go to China," Diane said forlornly, a little childishly. Then she drew away from him, straightening under a sudden impulse. "I could—there's that little house out in the country! I could go there! It's mine. For a few days, until I know—"

Rufus lifted her fingers to his lips. "There speaks the girl I looked for when I came back, and didn't find!"

"Go straight out Madison. Madison runs into the Duell Road and the house is on the Duell Road. Rufus," Diane's laugh was a broken sound in her throat. "Are you and I crazier than most?"

"I'd rather think, just now, we were saner."

not likely to seek any Japanese naval or merchant ships because Australian experts believed they would be more of a liability than an asset. The Australian Government's attitude toward reparations, he said, was designed to avoid endangering Japan's economic stability, and to see that claims did not make her a burden to the United Nations.

A Letter from Washington

By Jane Eads

WASHINGTON — Hope for at least one good meal a day for some of the millions of starving children in Europe and the Far East lies in the foreign relief program just approved by Congress.

Congress voted $350,000,000 for the program.

Of this sum, President Truman has to set aside $15,000,000 towards a United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund (ICEF) being set up to provide special nourishment, such as cod liver oil and milk, for children.

Funds from other United Nations members are to be sought also. The goal is to give one good meal a day for a year to 20,000,000 children. This number includes babies for whom extra supplies of milk are needed. It also includes a supplementary feeding for pregnant women.

The primary problem concerning children in war-ravaged countries today is undoubtedly that of underfeeding. Lack of calories and even minimum amounts of milk, proteins and fats necessary to produce growth and health in children.

The problem is an emergency. Help will be needed especially over the next two or three years.

It is estimated that the cost of the proposed meal under the ICEF plan would be about six cents a day, or roughly $20 a year.

Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the United Nations, says that in each country the government would provide a part of the cost of the meals for its own national child-feeding project.

The fund would provide in foodstuffs the deficit that would have to be covered to ensure the daily meal.

The UN Food and Agriculture Organization says a minimum of 2,000 calories per person per day is necessary to protect a population against the most serious diseases and the danger of civil unrest. This is known as "emergency subsistence" and is low that of underfeeding. Lack of calories and even minimum amounts of milk, proteins and fats necessary to produce growth in Europe have barely made the 2,000 mark, and then only with UNRRA aid. But even UNRRA's resources have not been sufficient to prevent underfeeding. UNRRA folds up at the end of June.

Underfeeding results in undernourished children. For instance, in the area around Athens, Greece, boys aged 14 are now three inches shorter than were boys the same age four years ago. Similar evidence of defective growth exists in Vienna, Prague, Warsaw and many other places. The rate of infant mortality is still far above pre-war levels everywhere in central and eastern Europe.

Tuberculosis, whose association with underfeeding is well known, is now the most important infectious disease in Europe.

Juvenile delinquency is rampant. It is the belief of trained observers that, unless standards of child life in the war-torn countries improve—quickly—the outlook for the whole world is dark.

U. S. Capitalists Agitating War, Reds Declare

Strangling Britain With Tactics To Get Trade, They Claim

WARSAW — Vice-Premier Wladyslaw Gomulka says American capitalism is trying to strangle Great Britain.

The fiery secretary-general of the communist-backed Polish workers party told a workers rally that Russians, Poles, and all other Slavonic people want peace but American capitalists have found war to be profitable, and were stiffening their attitude against the British.

Reviewing war sufferings of European nations, Gomulka said: "Not every country, however, suffered from the war. The United States of America, for instance, earned much money on it."

"That country was not devastated by the war and American capitalists got during the period 1941-1945 the sum of $52,000,000,000."

"According to American economists the amount of money spent by every American family for military purposes were $12 in 1913, $36 in 1939 and $500 in 1947."

"If one asks the defenders of the capitalistic system what the reason for such high expenditures for military purposes, he will get a deceitful and full-of-lie answer that it is for reasons of security of that country."

"But who can threaten them? There is an old answer—the USSR. But behind this deceitful answer is the insatiable appetite of monopolistic American capital which is reaching out for the petrol reserves of the world, for the British colonies, Japanese industry, and for domination in the world."

Hospital Shortage in U. S. Blamed on Wartime Program

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
NEW YORK, June 23—(AP)—The present shortage of hospital beds and nurses might have been avoided in part by enlarging civilian hospitals during the war rather than building army general hospitals, says Dr. Elliott C. Cutler, Moseley professor of surgery at Harvard University.

Writing in the American Journal of surgery, Dr. Cutler, a retired brigadier general, questioned whether such general hospitals, built at great expense, are needed.

"The Russians, whose injured vastly outnumbered ours, and the British did not do this. These countries provided such general hospitals as we did for overseas units, but in the home country they enlarged their civilian hospitals and added a few army doctors to help with the increasing load."

"The thinking behind this was intelligence of the long range type. With the war over, money spent on increases to civilian hospitals gives direct benefit to all the people whereas our system of providing strictly army hospitals leaves us practically nothing. Had we utilized a similar plan, the grave shortage of hospital beds and nurses might not be such a nightmare now."

Another step to avoid waste of medical personnel and materials in wartime, Dr. Cutler said, would be "unification, under a single service, of all medical corps, including army, navy, and air."

"The conservation of medical, nursing, administrative and transportation personnel would be tremendous. We would thus stop the silly and unnecessary duplication of hospitals, supply depots, transportation facilities, etcetera."

Dr. Cutler also urged the appointment, by leading medical and surgical societies, of expert civilian doctors and surgeons as consultants to the armed forces as well as war. They could set up plans of organization and equipment and modify them yearly in light of advances in medicine, he said.

Without cooperation between doctors, who know how men die, and the ordinance men who make weapons "we shall not apply even the rudimentary principles of science to warfare," Dr. Cutler said.

"We know little of what kills men on the battlefield, because no one has ever compiled a great study of large numbers of men found dead on the battlefield. We need teams of experts to conduct examinations of several thousand soldiers killed in battle under different conditions of combat and in different terrains in order to know what weapons injure the greatest number of the enemy."

Behind the Plow Is Outside the Law

WILLIAMSBURG, Ia. — (AP)—One of Iowa's most contented farmers is Fred Blythe. Although he has a law degree from Columbia University, Blythe has been a dirt farmer for 30 years.

"I've enjoyed every minute of these years on the farm," Blythe says. "I get more satisfaction than I ever could have in the law. My people were farmers, for generations and I guess it's sort of in my blood."

Blythe took his law degree at Columbia in 1916 and after graduation was chosen as one of a group to attend a three-months course in England under Norman Angell. Later he began practicing law in Chicago but soon yielded to the call of the farm.

US Navy Disposes Of Bulk of Surplus

PEARL HARBOR—(AP)—More than 90 percent of the 2,500,000 stock piles scattered throughout tons of surplus navy material the Pacific at the end of the war has been disposed of, the navy reports. The bulk of the remainder will be sold to China and the Philippines.

Wedding Vows Are Repeated In Jamestown

Spring flowers and palms adorned the altar of St. Augustine Catholic Church, Jamestown, where marriage vows were exchanged Saturday, June 14 at 8:30 A. M. by Miss Mary Agnes Broderick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Broderick, Jamestown, and Mr. Clarence A. Knecht, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Knecht, near Jamestown.

Rev. Karl Wuest, pastor of the church, read the double ring service and was celebrant of the nuptial mass.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Patsy Spriggs, Jamestown, organist, Mr. James Hohn, South Charleston, sang "Ave Maria," "O Promise Me" and "On This Day O Beautiful Mother."

For her maid of honor, the bride had her sister, Miss Elizabeth Ann Broderick, Miss Catherine Knecht, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Mary Helen Gauche, Fayetteville, O., were bridesmaids.

The maid of honor wore a gown of pink marquisette styled with a square neckline, trimmed with a ruffle. She wore a pink net veil with a flower crown and carried a bouquet of delphinium.

The bridesmaids wore gowns of yellow taffeta styled with full skirts and fitted bodices with square necklines. They wore yellow net veils with a crown of yellow carnations and carried arm bouquets of the same flowers.

Judy Hennigan was train bearer and appeared in a frock of white marquisette styled the same as the dress of the maid of honor. She wore a wreath of blue flowers.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, appeared in a gown of white chiffon with the skirt extending into a long train. The square neckline was edged with flowing ruffles which extended from the shoulders to the waistline in the back, ending in a lace bow. The gown had long, full sleeves. She wore a fingertip veil and a strand of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom. She carried a white orchid on a white prayer book.

Mr. Robert Knecht, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man and the ushers were Messrs. James Broderick, brother of the bride, and Joseph Knecht.

Fifty guests were entertained at a wedding breakfast at the Broderick home on W. Washington St., Jamestown.

When Mr. and Mrs. Knecht left on a wedding trip Saturday noon, the bride wore a printed bemberg dress with navy accessories and an orchid corsage. Upon their return the couple will reside on a farm near Jeffersonville.

Mrs. Lincoln Loring Schwart

As the hands of the clock approached three on Sunday afternoon in the First Presbyterian Church in an informal open church wedding, Miss Marilyn Milner, daughter of Mrs. W. B. Hyer of Columbus, and Mr. Harry A. Milner of Xenia, became the bride of Mr. Lincoln Loring Schwart, son of Mr. Omar Schwart and the late Mr. Schwart also of Xenia.

The impressive double ring ceremony was read by Reverend John K. Abernethy before an altar softly lighted with white tapers in two seven branch candelabra and tall standards filled with white gladioli and delphinium.

The lovely bride, given in marriage by her father, chose for her marriage a grey wool crepe dress-maker suit, collarless, with elaborate grey braid trim, and silver buttons. Her hat, matching in color, was a halo of net with a dainty side drape. She carried a white Bible, topped with a single white, purple throated, orchid, and white lace handkerchief. Her only jewelry was sterling earrings, the gift of the groom.

Miss Jane Riber, her maid of honor and only attendant, was dressed in a rose pink gabardine dress maker suit, a matching half hat with short navy veil, other accessories of navy and wore pinned at her shoulder a corsage of Johanna Hill roses.

Secretary of Commerce Says:

Keep Turning In Your Used Fats

Used cooking fats have represented a substantial part of our total industrial fat supply. The more than 600 million pounds of used fats that American home-makers have saved and turned in since 1942 has been of vital importance. It is a record of which every woman who contributed may well be very proud.

The United States still lacks adequate supplies of fats and oils. And we are particularly short of industrial fats. Many, if not most, of the things we all use and wear require industrial fats, or the products of industrial fats, such as soaps and glycerine, in their manufacture.

So won't you keep up your good work and continue to save and turn in every possible pound of used fat?

Germans' Faith In U.S. Target of Russian Papers

Propaganda Grows When Americans Starts Coming In

By RICHARD KASISCHKE
BERLIN. —(AP)— Russian-controlled newspapers in Germany are waging a campaign obviously aimed at shaking the Germans' faith in America by predicting that the United States' economy is headed for crisis and depression.

Spearheads of this campaign are the official newspaper of the Soviet military administration in Germany, the "Taegliche Rundschau," and the "Neues Deutschland," organ of the Soviet-sponsored, communist-dominated socialist unity party.

Simultaneously these papers tell the Germans that the economy of the Soviet Union is "crisis proof" and a good model for the rest of the world.

This anti-U. S. propaganda is carried on here at a time when the United States is sending millions of dollars worth of food monthly to feed the Germans while the Russians are making their occupation zone of Germany pay heavy reparations in equipment and manufactured products.

The Russian-controlled propaganda campaign also seeks to discredit the motives of the U. S. and Britain in Germany, claiming that raw materials sent into the western occupation zones on credit represent a plan to "enslave the German economy to western monopoly capitalism."

Recently sharp attacks have been made even against the flow of millions of gift parcels of food and clothing which private citizens in the U. S. and Britain have been sending to relatives and friends in Germany. Tens of thousands of Germans always are waiting anxiously for arrival of such parcels and a vast fund of thanks and political goodwill accrues to the country from which they come.

In an editorial entitled "salvation from America?" The newspaper "Neues Deutschland" sought to warn the Germans that they "should not be deceived by this flow of packages coming out of a country which suffered no war damage, because that doesn't mean that America's economy is solid."

The paper went on to predict that America was headed for a crisis because "unemployment is rising there and Henry Wallace has predicted that a depression is inevitable."

Wallace's prediction of economic troubles for America, made in a speech at Denver May 30, made

Veterans Are Making Success In Business--Trucking and Tavern Keeping Exceptions

By VERN HAUGLAND
WASHINGTON, June 23—(AP)—The government is finding the war veteran a good business risk.

The ex-GIs who got loans from the Veterans' Administration (VA) front pages in Russian-controlled newspapers here.

The speech was used in an attempt to buttress a series of articles which had been appearing in the official "Taegliche Rundschau" reporting ill omens under such headlines as "Declining Production in USA," "more and more signs of crisis," "England's dollar reserves vanishing."

In neighboring columns this newspaper printed contrasting reports from the Soviet Union: "Reestablishment of tractor works"; "prosperity in collective economy"; "the non-crisis economy of the Soviet Union."

The intended message for the Germans was plain—look east, not west.

guaranteed This represents 1,196 claims out of a total of 70,000 business loans with a face value of $201,000,000.

In addition to the outright failures, 1,079 other veteran borrowers have defaulted. Deane said, however, that some of the defaults may be "cured" or partially satisfied.

Under the GI bill, the VA began guaranteeing partial repayment of loans to veterans in September, 1944.

"The volume of defaults on loans has been small," said Deane. "The showing to date has been very creditable. The veteran businessman has turned out to be a surprisingly good investment."

Highest rate of failures has been among veterans who became single operators of trucks. Deane believes this is partly because the men lacked administrative experience and partly because of faulty equipment.

Some veteran's groups have charged that ex-GI truckers have been "taken for a ride" by second-hand car dealers disposing of machines that were fit only for the junkpile.

Trucking failures, said Deane, have been most numerous in the western states, where long distances and mountainous terrain add to difficulties. The first six months usually are the crucial ones.

Second highest business casualty rate was among operators of taverns: restaurants and night clubs.

"With such enterprises," Deane remarked, "it seems to be feast or famine."

The Veterans Administration also has reported that defaults on home-loans now number 2,821 out of 723,000 that have been guaranteed.

The VA said that "business loans accounted for about half of all defaults to date, although they comprised only 8.1 percent of all loans approved. The business loan default rate in March reached 3.9 percent of all business loans closed, while defaults on home loans amounted to only 0.3 percent of home loans closed."

The department of commerce recently reported a considerable increase in small business failures, and estimated that a large number of them involved veterans.

Small business "discontinuities"—about half of which were failures, in a broad sense, the others being the result of retirements, illnesses and the like—averaged 30,000 to 40,000 a quarter during 1944 and 1945.

During the last quarter of 1945 they increased to 37,400, then to 42,600 in the first quarter of 1946 and to 54,200 in the last quarter of that year. Of the firms going out of business, 93 percent employed less than 20 persons each.

Meanwhile new businesses, many of them operated by war veterans, continue to make their appearance. The commerce department said 272,800 new business establishments were organized in 1944; 411,800 in 1945, and 187,000 in the first quarter of 1946. Thereafter the number declined slightly, to 103,500 in the last quarter of 1946.

Soft-Hearted Hunters Warned Against Fawns

SACRAMENTO—(AP)—Yes, a spotted fawn is cute and irresistible, but just the same don't take one home if you find it alone.

The California state fish and game division warns soft-hearted hunters that the fawn is not lost or abandoned. Its mother is around somewhere and knows her business.

Besides, to take or possess a spotted fawn in this state happens to be illegal, and you could wind up paying a $50 fine, or doing 25 days in jail, or both.

A Weak, Run-Down Feeling Is Often A Warning

That The Red-Blood Is Getting Low

If you do not feel like your real self, do not have the urge to be up and doing, why not check-up on your blood strength? Look at the palms of your hands, your fingernails, your lips. The lobes of your ears—are they pale and off color?

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula, which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloating and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Eagles Break Even At Lancaster

Jeffersonville's Cubs put on a 2-run rally in the eighth to edge Chillicothe's Meads Sunday to take undisputed possession of third place in the SCO semi-pro baseball league while the Washington C. H. Eagles were dividing a doubleheader with the Glassmen at Lancaster.

At Greenfield, the revitalized Dodgers from Grove City lambasted Pappy Doyle's Athletics, 15 to 4, and at Ashville the Reds hung two decisive defeats on Jamestown's Lions by winning the first game 17 to 1 and the second 9 to 1 in seven innings.

Thus, half of the league games Sunday were nip and tuck battles from start to finish and half were lop-sided affairs in which the outcome never was in doubt.

Cubs Get Breaks
In the game at Jeffersonville, the Cubs took advantage of the breaks of the game to down the Meads 6 to 4. Although they were out, 10 to 4, the Cubs tallied 6 runs with help of nine bases on balls and five Mead errors.

The Meads tagged Amato for 10 hits, but he kept them so well scattered they were good for only four runs. A fast Jeffersonville defense that was tight in the

Legion Juniors Win First Game From Hamilton

Washington C. H. baseball fans—a sizeable number of them, too—got their first look at the American Legion Junior team Sunday at Wilson Field.

And, what they saw was admittedly much better than they had expected.

In spite of four misplays, the Washington C. H. boys came through with a 3 to 1 victory over the highly touted Junior team from Hamilton in their first game.

Playing fast, heads-up ball in the pinches and hitting when hitting counted, they converted five bingles into three runs.

Stockwell and Parrett, who went to the mound in the fifth, limited the Hamiltonians to four safeties.

With as little practice as Washington C. H. boys had been able to get in, the consensus of the crowd that nearly filled the stands was that they played exceptionally good ball.

Sponsored by the Hughey post of the American Legion and equipped by Carroll Halliday, the Ford agent here, the team is being coached by Bill Daugherty, coach of Center College, Marion (Dutch) Rife and Delbert Carr. J. Paul Streyer is chairman of the Legion committee.

They have been allotted two evenings a week for practice on Wilson Field.

The Juniors are a part of a nationwide baseball organization which has the backing of the major leagues which are represented by Babe Ruth in an advisory capacity.

Full Schedule For Softball

Another full and diversified schedule of softball is ahead for this week here.

In addition to the regular City League slate of four games, there will be two by Grange League outfits and two by boys of the comparatively new High School League.

To top off the program, a double feature for Friday night is in the making. Last Friday's benefit show in which two Washington C. H. teams—one made up of girls—beat two DP&L teams from Dayton brought $69 into the recreation fund. Fred Pierson, the director, said following the weekend check on receipts.

The attendance was estimated at "about a thousand." No admission was charged, but it was made easy for the fans to make a contribution as they came in the gate.

CITY LEAGUE
Monday—DP&L vs. New Holland.
Tuesday—Pennington vs. Lawton Legion.
Wednesday—Morton vs. Hughley Legion.
Thursday—Universal vs. Armbrust.

HIGH SCHOOL LEAGUE
Monday (6:30)—Senior No. 1 vs. Senior No. 2.
Wednesday (6:30)—Sophomores vs. Juniors.

GRANGE LEAGUE
Tuesday—Fayette vs. Selden.
Thursday—Madison vs. Forest Charlie.

Good Hope Wins From New Vienna

Each team had one good inning in the second seven-inning game. The Eagles put across three runs in the fifth to even the score after the Glassmen had scored three in the fourth. Another in the sixth put the Eagles out in front momentarily as the Glassmen came back with two in their half.

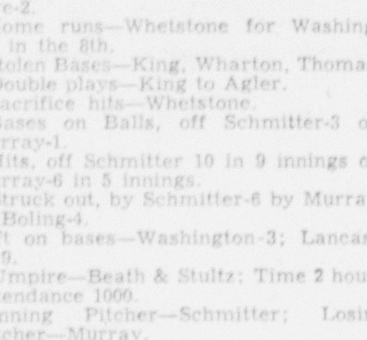

Reds Hold Lead
The Reds had little trouble holding to the SCO League lead when the Lions came over from Jamestown. They romped around the paths with abandon and smacked out a total of 19 hits, including five doubles and a triple, in the first game of their twin bill which they won 17 to 1.

The Reds kept up their winning ways and got no more generous with the Lions in the second game and wrote a 9 to 1 victory in the book.

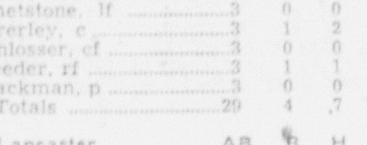

Athletics Swamped
Grove City's Dodgers wallopped the ball over the Greenfield lot as they turned in a 15 to 4 win over the Athletics. Two big innings, the first and the fourth, in which they tallied seven runs, put the Dodgers on easy street.

In spite of the one-sided score, the play in the field kept up the interest.

Good Hope Wins From New Vienna

With Virgil Palmer leading the attack with a pair of triples and a double, Good Hope's baseball team Sunday won its second game in three starts this season by trouncing the boys from New Vienna, 11 to 4, on the Good Hope lot.

Next Sunday the Good Hoppers are slated to go to New Petersburg for a return game with the team they beat, 6 to 3, in the season's opener.

Tom Smalley, the Good Hope headman, sent Bobby Dawes against the New Viennese at the start of Sunday's game and finished up with Kenny Dawes hurling the last three frames. Together they held the opposition to eight hits which were so scattered that in spite of five Good Hope errors they were good for only four tallies.

By smart base running, timely hitting and taking advantage of the breaks the Good Hope boys added up 11 markers on eight bingles.

More Employers Are Added to List in Five Months

A number of employers covered by the Ohio Unemployment Compensation law were added to the list in Fayette County the past few months in Ohio generally the increase for the first five months this year, was pronounced, Dale Dunifon, administrator of the Ohio Bureau of Unemployment Compensation has said.

There was a net gain of 2,332 new Ohio accounts established and certified as subject to the unemployment compensation law this year, he said.

An analysis of new and discontinued accounts for 1946 showed a healthy net gain of 9,116, nearly three times the net gain in 1945.

At the end of 1946, 62,700 employment compensation tax lists. In 1945 there were 53,674.

Dunifon estimated that workers employed in these firms and protected by the unemployment compensation law averaged 2,020,000 in 1946 as compared with 1,914,000 in 1945.

Concerns in commerce or industry having three or more workers pay unemployment compensation taxes for the protection of their employees against the risk of involuntary unemployment, Dunifon pointed out.

Exemptions from the tax include: employers of agricultural workers; domestic servants in private homes; college faculties; governmental employees; and workers in certain nonprofit institutions. Railroad workers are protected by a separate federal program.

New Chevrolet Truck Display Here Saturday

'Advance-Design' Line To Be Shown All Over Country

The new advance-design line of Chevrolet trucks and commercial cars will be shown to the public Saturday in Washington C. H., it was announced today by R. Brandenburg Motor Sales, Inc.

"All over the nation on that date, Chevrolet dealers will be exhibiting the new trucks," Brandenburg said. "We are having a special showing in Washington C. H. and cordially invite truck owners, fleet operators and others interested in trucks to visit our showrooms."

Advance information on the trucks, Brandenburg said, indicates that the line will be the most comprehensive in the history of Chevrolet and will feature driver comforts and conveniences not heretofore available in motor trucks.

"For the first time in the history of the automotive industry a truck has been designed which has as a basic concept the comfort and safety of the driver," Mr. Brandenburg said. "We predict that the result will have the complete endorsement of truck owners and drivers."

Re-styled and precision-engineered, the advance-design line of trucks, Brandenburg declared, provides an efficient, dependable, safe and low-cost unit for practically every type of hauling and transportation requirement.

The display at the R. Brandenburg Motor Sales, Inc. will open at 8 A. M. and close at 6 P. M. daily. Trained truck men will be on hand to explain the features of the vehicles.

Veterans Can Receive Aid On Wednesday

Insurance Problems To Be Discussed By Representative

Fayette County veterans may receive help with their insurance problems from Leroy G. Steinbeck, who will conduct an all-day insurance "clinic" here Wednesday in the Veteran's Service Center in Memorial Hall.

Steinbeck is an information specialist in GI insurance for the Veteran's Administration, attached to the Columbus branch office of the VA. As head of the VA's insurance Conservation Service, he is concerned with the accounts of the 1,600,000 World War II veterans in the tri-state area.

According to VA figures, said Robert W. Beoddy, traveling VA contact representative, who makes regular trips here every Wednesday, of the nearly 2,000 World War II veterans in Fayette County, approximately 1,500 have allowed $14,000,000 of National Service Life Insurance to lapse. Steinbeck's visit will allow veterans here to talk over their insurance needs and problems, with this authority on veteran's insurance, said Beoddy.

"The Veterans Administration," said Steinbeck, "maintains no agents or sales force; it is interested in acquainting veterans with all of the changes that have been incorporated in GI insurance in the past few months. "Then, too," he added, "$14,000,000 of lapsed GI insurance, if it is allowed to exist, would represent a severe blow to the economic security of the veteran's dependents, as well as to this community."
